LINCOLN HIGH SCHOOL

Updating Tradition for a New Century

One of Manitowoc's most beloved landmarks, Lincoln High carries a sense of history for generations of citizens. Built in 1923 on scenic Roeff's Hill on the Lake Michigan shore, the school's original garden setting was designed by noted Prairie School landscape architect Jens Jensen.

A $15 million restoration, completed in 1999, preserves the character of the original structure while pointing to the educational needs of the twenty-second century. A cosmetic facelift has been augmented by infrastructure upgrades, telecommunications wiring, new multi-media and science facilities, a new gym, and other innovations.

The first hint of the large-scale changes is found at the school's exterior. The auditorium ramp has been replaced with a broad staircase. The statue of Abe Lincoln, donated by the Class of 1961, is now ringed by a more graceful and functional circle drive.

Infrastructure changes are invisible but extensive. They include heating and electrical systems updates, replacement of plumbing piping and some fixtures, asbestos removal, exterior restoration, roof maintenance, window weather stripping and some window replacement.

A proud new look

The new color scheme combines Lincoln's traditional red with the blues and greens of Wisconsin waters and forests. Classrooms are bright and welcoming with paint and vinyl flooring in the new colors, new ceilings and light fixtures, white marker boards in place of chalkboards, and woodwork refinished in a warmer shade. Carpeted areas feature a wave motif inspired by the lake. In the hallways, indirect lighting as well as bowl-shaped accent fixtures recall Lincoln's 1920s roots. Jewel-toned lockers make the long corridors sparkle. Other 1999 changes include:

- The remodeled office is now across from the main entrance. The guidance department is located to the left of the main doors. Both have been refurbished and feature more functional reception areas and offices.
- The old gym has been converted to two levels, now housing a multimedia technology classroom and studios (first floor) and an electronics lab, drafting and design classroom, and tiered lecture room (second floor).
- The library and adjoining work rooms have been combined to form one large space. New paint, flooring, shelves, and furniture, as well as networked computers, make it a conducive place for study and research.
- The pool has been raised six feet, enlarged to six lanes, and refurbished with new tile and a new viewing area. New locker rooms complete the transformation. After hours, the pool is accessible from the new top-of-the-hill entrance just north of the JFK.
- The band and chorus/orchestra rooms in the renovated music wing have a stunning view of Lake Michigan, thanks to new ceiling-high windows.
- Art, foods, and child development classes have bright new classrooms in the former technology education wing.
- A new science wing, located just south of the library, has nine state-of-the-art classrooms with adjacent lab areas. The science office houses computers for staff and student use.
- A new 6500-square-foot gym, and the mezzanine above it, are used for school and community athletics.
- Site work and minor construction tie the JFK fieldhouse to the main building, providing handicap access to all levels.
- A new track replaces the old tennis courts. A new 90-car parking lot is just south of the JFK.

A quote from Abraham Lincoln (above) is stencilled just inside Lincoln High School's main entrance doors.
